HOPE.

"Hope deferred maketh sick the heart."

Oh weary, weary is the heart,

Of hope deprived;

For resignation it is vain,

Math strived.

Oh sad and lonely is the heart,

When hope is gone;

No longer doth it now rejoice,

It can but mourn.

All dim and darkened is the eye,

When hope is dead;

All joy and gladness from it far,

Away hath fled!

And pale and sallow is the cheek,

Hope is not near;

All sad and gloomy is the mind,

As Autumn here.

I'll lay me down nor wish to live,

Now hope hath fled

My heart will cease to throbb

When with the dead!

Why mourn my soul the death,

Of earthly hope?

Look to the skies 'tis there

The bud doth open

Let Heaven and Jesus be thy faith,

The trust—thy love;

Then will my soul find hope

In Heaven above.

From the New York Herald, March.

Full Account of the Double Suicide and Child Murder in the Bowery—

Mysteries and Miseries of New York.

Yesterday we gave a brief sketch of a tragedy that had been enacted in the Bowery, whereby two young, beautiful and gifted females, together with the child of one of them, had come to a mournful and untimely end. The circumstances attending the death of these poor girls are attended with more of mystery and cruel misery than any of the many strange tragedies that are constantly occurring in this great metropolis,

and which it is our duty as public journalists to record.

Some two years ago, two females, named respectively Cecelia and Wanda Stein, and the child of the latter—a bright little boy, five years of age, named

Edward—were residing in the Bowery, and occupied apartments at

No. 335

Bowery, rented to them by Mr. James

Black, who also lived on the premises.

Cecelia was the eldest, and, though young, was a beautiful woman, and possessed a fine intellect, and was very kind and affectionate to her mother, and to her sister, and to her child. She was a very kind and affectionate mother, and was very kind and affectionate to her child. She was a very kind and affectionate mother, and was very kind and affectionate to her child.

rigible delinquents, Messrs. Burnett & Co., of Columbus, Ohio, two of us were accidentally substituted for two P's; this would not have been very annoying, except to oneself, had it not been for the fact, that in the city of Columbus, there is a firm, as we learn from a courteous letter from the gentlemen themselves, styled Burnett & Co., dealers in Hats, Caps, &c., to whose establishment the paper was sent; with whom we have never had any dealings; and whom we have every reason to believe from the tone of their letter, are reasonable, straightforward and honorable gentlemen.

We take pleasure in thus correcting our accidental error; and trust that they will be equally pleased to accept our amende honorable.

The letter in question adds—"P. S.—There is a firm in this city by the name

That is the very firm which we wished the Herald to reach; and if it is not too much trouble, we would be pleased if our respected friends, Burnett & Co., would transfer to their rightful owner, those copies of the Herald which have reached them through our typographical mistake. By so doing they will confer a favor upon us, while adding to our already high appreciation of their courtesy and integrity.

Our petite friend, Myndor Von Kraus, has recently been fitting up his well supplied Confectionary establishment in first-rate style; his trays, jars of Candy, Pickles, Preserves, Wines, and in "short every variety of 'goodies' sudden luxuries in his line, present a very attractive appearance to youthful eyes and indeed appetites! he is perfectly au fait in his business.

his business, and gets up party and wedding fixings in a style not to be excelled, at short notice and upon liberal and accommodating terms. Give him a call when you need anything in his line; for depend upon our say so, there the most fastidious appetite can be gratified.

Q. We learn that the Gift Waterprice of R. N. Bradley, is meeting with considerable encouragement—that the tickets go off like hot cakes! Here's a chance to use a "nibble sixpence" tickets only $1; by which you may realize hundreds, and cannot in any event, lose but a trifle. See his advertisement in another column; and encourage him and benefit yourself, by investing a few surplus dollars in the purchase of tickets for your sweet-hearts, wives, mothers or sisters.

A true friend—how hard to find.
